

things to consider

sunglasses to protect your eyes

Exposure to the sun's ultraviolet (UV) rays can cause cataracts, macular degeneration, and skin cancer around the eyes. And because UV rays affect kids and adults alike, everyone should use UV protection.

Sunglasses are not only a fashion accessory, they are a health necessity – especially for children.

computer lenses to ease digital eye strain

If you are on a digital device more than three hours a day, you may want to consider computer glasses. These glasses have special lenses that allow you to see your keyboard and reading materials, to see across an office, and to see the distance across a conference room comfortably.

Computer glasses also help to minimize neck, back and shoulder problems, as well as eyestrain.

add to your go-to pair with a second pair of glasses

You own more than one pair of shoes, then why not own a second pair of eyeglasses? A second pair of glasses can give you an alternative look. They can also be a great back-up option should you're primary pair of eyeglasses become damaged.

Kaiser Permanente members typically have coverage for medically necessary eye examinations, and some members, including those members with the pediatric vision benefit under their Affordable Care Act plan, may be able to apply a supplemental benefit to their purchases. Otherwise, the services and products described here are provided on a fee-for-service basis, separate from and not covered under your health plan benefits, and you are financially responsible to pay for them. For specific information about your health plan benefits, please see your Evidence of Coverage.
